Prices of Homes Now Stable

It's Still Difficult For Young Couples

By HEIDI VAN ZANT

Five years ago, a buyer could have purchased a rambling home with a view in Millbrae for $75,000. Today, for that same amount, one can purchase a Daly City one-story home in the fog.

However, the one bright spot in the North San Mateo County housing picture is that home prices have stabilized in the past year, according to local real estate agents.

The panic buying which characterized the real estate market last summer has ceased. Buyers are more thoughtful about purchasing a home — perhaps they are thinking about interest rates, which have climbed to 10 per cent.

While the market has returned to a so-called normal state, this is not to say anyone who wants to can still afford a home.

Real estate agents say most young couples cannot buy a home anymore unless parents have loaned or given them $10,000 needed for a down payment.

And once a couple gets into its dream house, they can expect monthly mortgage payments and taxes to cost them $600-$800 a month.

Real estate agents from five cities in the north end of the Peninsula also have this to say:

• Home values have more than doubled in the past five years, pulling the average price of a home in Daly City up to $75,000 and up to $110,000 in Millbrae.

• Many homes are on the market now but there are not nearly enough buyers, meaning houses are staying on the market for several months.

• Houses have not appreciated the 20-30 per-cent they did last year. And in some areas, prices have dropped from last summer's selling price.

• Proposition 13 is having an uncertain effect on the market with several real estate offices reporting it has slowed business down.

* * * *

There are many homes for sale in South San Francisco but not enough buyers who can afford the average-priced $85,000 home, according to real estate broker, John Donnelan, who has his own realty office.

"So many young people want to buy but they can't get the down payment," he said. "If they're trying to save it, with the price of living today, they can't."

Buyers have a good selection now, Donnelan said, adding that prices have stabilized in the last few months and even are dropping.

But high monthly payments of up to $800 are scaring buyers, he said.

That's one of the problems," Donnelan explained. "All of a sudden you find the wife going back to work."

For $65,000, a buyer can get a two-bedroom home in South San Francisco. For $85,000, one could purchase a three-bedroom, two-bath home, possibly one with a family room.

"To me," Donnelan said, "these things (prices(always seem high."

Even though Proposition 13 may mean a reduction in the monthly tax payment, Donnelan said buyers have not been rushing into real estate offices.

"I think Proposition 13 has slowed it down in a way," he said, adding that people are waiting until the tax bills come next fall to see what the actual savings will be.

The real estate market in Millbrae is healthier now than it was last summer, said Joan Greenhalgh of Green Oak Realty.

"We have probably a higher inventory of houses for sale than we've had in quite a long time," she said. "Buyers are in a position to think before they leap."

Three years ago homes were quickly snatched up, but now they are staying on the market three - four months.

To buy a home in Millbrae, she said, buyers usually must have a least $30,000 for a down payment and then be prepared to pay up to $800 a month.

"Millbrae is in a unique situation," she said. "There are no real starter homes."

Police, Fire in Battle

Colma's police and firemen will battle one another Aug. 13 for a shiny trophy that will be awarded to the winners of the city's Second Annual Softball Tournament.

The public is invited to the game, which will begin at 12:30 p.m. at Colma School on Hillside Boulevard. Refreshments will be served to the teams and their families following the game.

Willie Lemp, spokesman for the firemen's team, said he's certain his team will keep the trophy for another year. Last year, the firemen beat the police team, 17-1.

Playing first base for the firemen will be Gary Podesta. Chief George Riccomi will play second base and Wayne Podesta will play third base.

"Our pitcher is a secret," Lemp commented, adding, "We don't plan on any relief pitchers because this guy will go all the way."

Lt. Arthur Dollosso, head of the policemen's team, said Carl Tromberg will play second base, Councilman Eugene Daneluz will play third base and he will play first base. The policemen's catcher will be Councilman Fred Garbini, shortstop will be Michael Taylor and Chief Jim Dorris will be pitcher.

Referring to Dorris, Dollosso said, "He got shelved last year but he's all we've got."

Dollosso declared he isn't worried about the firemen's surprise pitcher. "It's probably some paraplegic or old person," he scoffed.

The lieutenant said he's convinced that his "crack discipline" team will sail to victory because of its consistent practices held at an "undisclosed location."

Fireman Lemp remarked, "We've seen the Police Department practicing for the last four weeks and they've got a long way to go. We never practice — we don't have to."

The tall talkers will be sorted out from the performers this Sunday.

Clean Indoor Air Initiative

'Fairness' Key to Bill

By BILL HURSCHMANN

"We've bent over backwards to make it fair and acceptable to both parties involved" says the San Mateo County campaign coordinator for Proposition 5, the Clean Indoor Air initiative.

Of course, what Pete Antoniak is talking about is the rights of smokers and non-smokers.

And, if voters approve the ballot proposition in November, California will find itself with the most comprehensive law dealing with smoking in any of the states.

Simply, stated, the initiative "finds and declares that smoking in enclosed areas is detetrimental to nonsmokers. With specified exceptions, prohibts smoking in enclosed public places, places of employment and educational and health facilities. Requires restaurants to establish nonsmoking sections in dining areas. Requires posting of signs designating areas where smoking is prohibited."

The intent of the legislation, Antoniak adds, is not to discriminate against smokers but to protect the rights of non-smokers. "A lot of people throughout the state need a law so they can get out and enjoy the pursuit of happiness."

Antoniak, who lives in Millbrae with his wife and three-year-old son and works as a civil engineer at the Navy facility in San Bruno, has worked fairly steadily on Proposition 5 since last September. The drive to get the issue on the ballot began then in need of 312,000 signatures. It obtained more than 600,000, with Antoniak and his supporters gathering 23,000 in San Mateo County.

His hard-core group of about three dozen volunteers were assisted locally by another 300 persons who circulated petitions door-to-door. "We picked up not only civic volunteers," Antoniak says, "but groups such as the Heart Association, the Lung Association, the California Cancer Society and the Sierra Club."

So far — and Antoniak says he already has heard six radio commercials against Proposition 5, and it's only the beginning of August — the tobacco industry is the lone opponent. "The tobacco industry is worried, and one reason is that California is a trend-setter and they fear other states may follow if it is approved here. Also, the whole idea that smoking may not be acceptable in certain areas takes away the glamour of smoking. And there's their profits," he said.

The early anti-5 commercials, he adds, have charged that the proposed legislation is too confusing. But Antoniak disagrees. "If we made a short, concise piece of legislation, it might not cover all the bases and create lots of problems, as has the Jarvis-Gann Initiative," he said.

A unique clause in the initiative is that it has a section in it that allows it to be amended by a majority of the legislature. "If

Couples Say Homes High

Several people who have purchased homes on the Peninsula recently say they like living where they are but admit it is costly.

Odette and Johann Dolfi of Pacifica bought their two-story home for $69,000 earlier this summer after they had looked for four months for a house in their price range.

"We found out right away that Burlingame is impossible. Millbrae is too," Mrs. Dolfi said, adding that they ruled out living in San Bruno because of the airport noise.

In January the couple was notified they would have to move out of their apartment in Burlingame, so they began looking to buy their first home.

"We thought buy something now or forget it," Mrs. Dolfi said.

The couple and their 17-year-old daughter canvassed the area from Redwood City to Brisbane, looking for a home "with character, not just a square box sitting in the middle of neighbors," she said.

When they saw their home in Linda Mar with its 150-foot-long backyard, she said they knew right away it was the one they wanted.

Jim Nagel said he and his wife looked at hundreds of homes before deciding on an older home in Burlingame "for under $90,000."

Nagel, 31, said they looked at homes from Belmont to Burlingame and found them "absurdly expensive."

Although they found many homes in their price range, Nagel said it took them four months to find the one for them.

"We were pretty picky. We weren't in any hurry," he said, adding that he and his wife were consistently shown homes that did not meet their needs by realtors just anxious to make a sale.

"I was really aware of the selling that was involved," Nagel said.

San Bruno fireman Tim Roylance said he brought his first home on Third Avenue for $39,000 three year ago.

Earlier this year he sold the home for $64,500 and moved into an $86,000 home in the Crestmoor area. Today, he said, his home would sell for about $110,000.

"If I was to go out today and buy it, I don't think I could," he said, noting that he bought the home the day he saw it because "it was a hell of a deal."

To get into his first home Roylance, 24, said he "scraped together" the money by selling a car, borrowing from his credit union and using savings.

Electrician Jerry Dalessio, 31, bought his large

Jeff Board Lifts Controls

A hiring freeze and other controls inspired by Proposition 13 were lifted Monday by trustees of the Jefferson Union High School District after Superintendent Floyd Gonella pointed out that the district must prepare for the opening of school in a few weeks.

Only one of the four trustees present opposed the lifting of the hiring freeze.

Board chairman James Roman said he could not approve hiring as usual without exploring "other options."

The other board members appeared to agree with Gonella, who declared, "Time constraints ... prohibit making any major conceptual changes for the coming year."

Roman also cast the only "no" vote on a motion to allow the administration to hire staff for the regular program, adult school, athletic program and as teachers' aides. Gonella termed those positions "crucial in regard to the operation of schools."

Explaining that he objected only to motions involving hiring, Roman approved other motions with the rest of the board to:

• Lift a freeze on salary steps given for advancement.

• Eliminate a provision that permitted the district to put staff on an involuntary leave of absence for 30 days.

• End a freeze on purchase orders.

Trustees spent the majority of the four-hour meeting discussing Gonella's proposed 1978-79 budget, which they tentatively adopted last week. The $16.1 million budget is just $1.25 million smaller than the budget anticipated before Proposition 13 went into effect.

District budget officer Ann Stevens responded to allegations previously made by a group of parents and teachers by pointing out that the organization had failed to take all budgetary transfers into account.

Dubbed "Save Our Schools," the group had charged that the district budgeted more money than was spent in a number of budget categories, including funds set aside to pay overtime, money allocated for cleaning band uniforms and conference and legal fees.

For example, Ms. Stevens said all the schools except Westmoor High School had used the $300 allotted for cleaning band uniforms to repair instructional equipment instead.

Roman hotly remarked that he thought the purpose of the board was to put money where it was needed, not to create pools of money that the schools could spend as they wished.

"We don't know what they need," countered trustee Ruth Boudinot.

Roman replied, "If we're going to sit here and evaluate the amount of money that goes into any account, then watch the schools divvy it up as soon as school begins, then I feel I've wasted my time and lost control."

Roman went on to propose that the district consider zero base budgeting.

But several district officials said the complicated budget categories are a necessary evil required by home is $110,000, with prices ranging from $75,000 in Bayside Manor (east of El Camino Real) to $200,000 in Mills Estate.

Listed on the market recently was a two-bedroom, one-bath home selling for $105,000. Mrs. Greenhalgh said five years ago this 40-year-old Spanish-style home in Millbrae Highlands sold for $40,000.

The buyers who are the most upset with the cost of homes are those from out of state, she said.

They may have had a $50,000 home in the midwest and cannot find something comparable to it in Millbrae for even $125,000.

"It usually is a tremendous shock," she said. "They are in a state of collapse for several days."

The real estate picture in Daly City is much the same — many homes for sale and few buyers.

That is the opinion of Bob Casey of Aetna Realty, who said he also has noticed that young couples can't afford today's high prices.

"We're not selling to the young, first-time buyers as we should," he said, adding that the answer for these couples may be in condominiums.

Casey is worried that home prices may go too high, that everyone eventually will be priced out of the market.

"We'll be like they are in some foreign countries," he said. "There will be no real estate market.

"I see people buy a house and I don't know how the hell they make the payments," Casey said.

A trend in the Daly City area, the agent added, is for several Oriental families to purchase a home together. In the last five years, Casey said, thousands of Oriental families have moved into Daly City.

* * * *

In Pacifica, "if you have a substantial down payment, now would be an excellent time to buy," according to broker George Edsell, who has his own office.

This area still attracts the first-time buyer, he said, even though the average home is selling for about $75,000.

When asked if a good bargain can still be found in Pacifica, Edsell said: "My instinctive answer is to say 'No.'"

However, he said, when home prices are compared with those in San Francisco, "It's a first-class bargain."

Again, as in other surrounding cities, there are many homes for sale and a lesser number of buyers.

This is a turn-around from last summer when, Edsell said, realtors were "virtually conducting a public auction" when they put homes on the market.

"In May last year, the market was thoroughly overheated," Edsell said.

Now there is less speculation buying, fewer residents are moving quickly into a larger second home and homes are staying on the market for much longer.

Prices have been dropped from last year, he said.

In comparing today's prices with those of five years ago, Edsell said they have more than doubled.

Executive-type homes in Park Pacifica were selling for $50,000 and now go up to $110,000. Pacifica Manor homes that sold for $27,000 are selling for $55,000.

The typical Linda Mar rancher — three bedrooms, one bath — was built for $11,000 20 years ago, sold for $30,000 five years ago and now is selling for $65,000, Edsell said.

Even once a couple has qualified to buy a home and can come up with the down payment, Edsell said, he is finding their worries are not over because of the high monthly payments.

"The home, instead of becoming a pleasurable new thing, becomes sort of millstone," he said.

Homes in San Bruno, if they are "properly priced," are taking six to eight weeks to sell, said broker Bob Marshall, who has his own office.

The market in San Bruno is slower than it was last summer, and Marshall blames the Jarvis-Gann property tax initiative for some of that.

"A lot of the reluctance now is caused by the Proposition 13 situation — not knowing which way the taxes are going," he said.

Last summer homes were on the market one or two weeks "and there was no reluctance to pay the asking price," he said.

Now the market is more stable in San Bruno.

"Buyers are taking a little more time and they do have more to choose from," Marshall said.

The average selling price is $85,000, either for a home on the lower west side of San Bruno or for a larger home in the fog belt near Skyline Boulevard.

"There are still some good buys," Marshall said. "The purchase of real estate will always be a good investment."

there are unworkable provisions in it we won't have to go to court to change them," he says.

Antoniak, who never has worked in a political campaign before, got involved with this one because, for one, he's allergic to smoke. For another, he believes as a male, healthy and outspoken, he's in a better position than many to push the initiative. For example, a child with asthma would receive very little support in a restaurant clouded with smokers, he says, even though it would be detrimental to the child's health.

"We're trying not to interfere with people's private lives and we don't want to bother the nonsmokers," Antoniak says. "But smoking is bad for your health even if you are a non-smoker. People are simply getting more and more concerned about smoke, more and more aware and more and more annoyed."

He maintains that smokers, also, can enjoy a cigarette more by knowing that they are not disturbing others. And two-thirds of California's adult population do not smoke, he adds.

Places where non-smokers do not need to go to on a regular, daily basis are excluded from the initiative. These include bars, retail tobacco stores, hotel and motel rooms, rooms used for private social functions, lobby areas other other designated smoking areas, private hospital rooms, pool halls and gambling halls.

Antoniak, who admits he's spent thousands of hours after work and on weekends working on Proposition 5, says that because it is a grass-roots campaign with no corporate financial support, the pro-5 forces are in desperate need of money. "We're up against big money now (the tobacco industry), but we've written a good piece of legislation and we need money to get the message across through commercials and the like."

Although indicating he's not a pollster, Antoniak predicts that Proposition 5 will pass by a 60-40 vote.

"It's the mood of the people," he says. "It's time has come."

the county Office of Education.

Gonella declared that he believes a budgeting formula taking both individual school needs and district requirements into consideration works best.

Growing angry for a moment, Gonella said the charges by "Save Our Schools" of over-budgeting had infuriated some management employes who had cut corners in anticipation of Proposition 13's passage. "One of these people recovered his own chairs. Next year, he would spend the money," Gonella noted.

But Roman continued to argue for closer accounting practices, saying that spending $300 allocated for cleaning uniforms on something else "looks like we made a mistake."

"We're never going to eliminate numerical conflicts from what the county demands . . . and still be flexible," Gonella said.

Trustee Jane Powell stressed that Roman's opinion was not shared by other members of the board.

Mrs. Boudinot remarked that she was concerned about the "un-information" presented by Save Our Schools representatives who did not make any effort to verify their statistics with the district office.

Representing Save Our Schools, American Federation of Teachers Local No. 1481 president Mary Ballard accused the district of continually over-budgeting, "carelessly and sloppily," and then transferring money into different categories.

She said, "I would suggest that either an account was expended as it was budgeted or it was not. And if it was not expended as budgeted, if I were in management, then I would want to know why."

Gonella replied that Mrs. Ballard's accusations were "erroneous and misleading." He challenged her to submit any charges she wished to make in writing.

Although trustees discussed seven budgeting changes proposed in a memo from absent trustee John Sloane, they did not reach any consensus on Sloane's ideas. Among his suggestions were:

• Adding more psychological services provided by the Pacifica Youth Service Bureau to make up for a psychologist who will be missing next year.

• Having parents clean sports uniforms rather than having the district pay for cleaning.

• Eliminating other freshman sports programs in addition to frosh football, which Gonella had suggested eliminating. Gonella said there are no other sports programs solely for freshmen.

• Arranging for wilderness students to help maintain school campuses.

When trustee George Robinson expressed concern about setting a future trend of not having two associate superintendents, Gonella said, "In essence, the state responded with band-aid funding and we responded with band-aid budgeting."

He later added that there will be some money for curriculum development, though not as much as before.

Other business:

BUSING — Reporting on the feasibility of using San Mateo County Transit District buses as a supplement to school busing, Assistant Superintendent Ernest Ribera said SamTrans does not want to get into the school busing business. "To my knowledge, SamTrans hasn't worked out any agreements with other school districts," Ribera said.

home with a view of South San Francisco and the airport two years ago for $65,000.

He paid $33,000 for his first home in the Richmond District of San Francisco four years ago.

His home on Spruce Drive was bought the day he saw it because "I saw a lot of things that I could do with it," he said, adding that he followed the real estate market closely and knew a good deal when he saw one.

Dalessio is now remodelling the lower portion of the home, making his home an even better investment than if it is not re-done.

"I'm just trying to compete in a competitive world," he said, noting that his home could be worth almost twice what he paid for it.

Mary's Help Builds Bypass Surgery Program

Mary's Help Hospital in Daly City recently has joined the select group of hospitals in the Bay Area which provide comprehensive therapeutic services for treatment of heart disease in adults. During the past few months many patients successfully have undergone coronary artery bypasses at Mary's Help.

Although open heart surgery first was performed successfully 25 years ago, coronary artery disease could be surgically treated only more recently as sophisticated new techniques for diagnosis and treatment were developed. Coronary bypass surgery was developed as a surgical procedure only 10 years ago.

EXCEPT in cases of trauma, heart surgery is an elective procedure; it has become the fifth most commonly performed surgical procedure in American hospitals. Every year over 100,000 people, with the advice of their physicians, choose coronary artery bypass as their way of dealing with coronary artery disease.

It is well-documented that coronary artery disease is the most common disease of adult Americans. The disease develops when fatty deposits build up in the coronary arteries, cutting off vital blood supply to the heart muscle itself. When the heart's blood supply is being limited the patient experiences chest pain or a tightness in the chest. Heart function is impaired.

While the majority of the people with this problem can be helped, more than a third will die suddenly.

Most people know that hypertension, or elevated blood pressure, can lead to heart disease. Blood pressure measurements take only a few minutes and can be done by paramedical personnel. More people could take advantage of this simple test.

HEART specialists often state that they prefer to detect heart problems before they reach the critical stage. With that goal in mind, physicians use a variety of comprehensive hospital diagnostic services that monitor heart functions. These services act as a "Distant Early Warning System" to alert physicians and patients to the progress of cardiac trouble.

When a patient is scheduled for possible cardiac disease diagnosis at Mary's Help, the first three hospital departments visited are Radiology, the chemistry laboratory and cardiology.

In Radiology, a chest film is taken to determine if any enlargement or alteration in the shape or size of the heart has occurred. The patient also is tested to see if his symptoms could have been the result of pulmonary problems.

In the laboratory, technologists test the blood for the presence of an enzyme suggesting that the heart has been under stress.

The Cardiology Department administers tests which may show if the heart chamber walls are in good condition and which measure the heart's electrical action (the EKG) and performance under stress (the treadmill exercise test).

IF THE patient's test results suggest that further diagnosis is needed, his physician may refer him to Nuclear Medicine and in some cases to the Cardiac Catheterization and Special Procedures Laboratory.

The Nuclear Medicine Department uses radioactive tracers to detect possible damage from recent heart attacks and evaluate the performance of the pumping chambers of the heart.

Physicians use cardiac catheterization and cineangiography to accurately evaluate the pumping action of the heart and to decide if cardiac surgery is needed. Unlike the EKG or Nuclear Medicine tests, cardiac catheterization is invasive, meaning that it requires that special thread-sized tubes be passed into the chambers of the heart through arteries and veins.

In the heart, pictures are taken with radiopaque dye, pressures are measured and blood is sampled. Cardiac catheterization always involves hospital admission and usually is required before cardiac surgery.

THE POINT of all these diagnostic procedures is to give physicians the information they need to evaluate the patient's condition and to decide on the best form of treatment: Should the patient be treated medically or surgically?

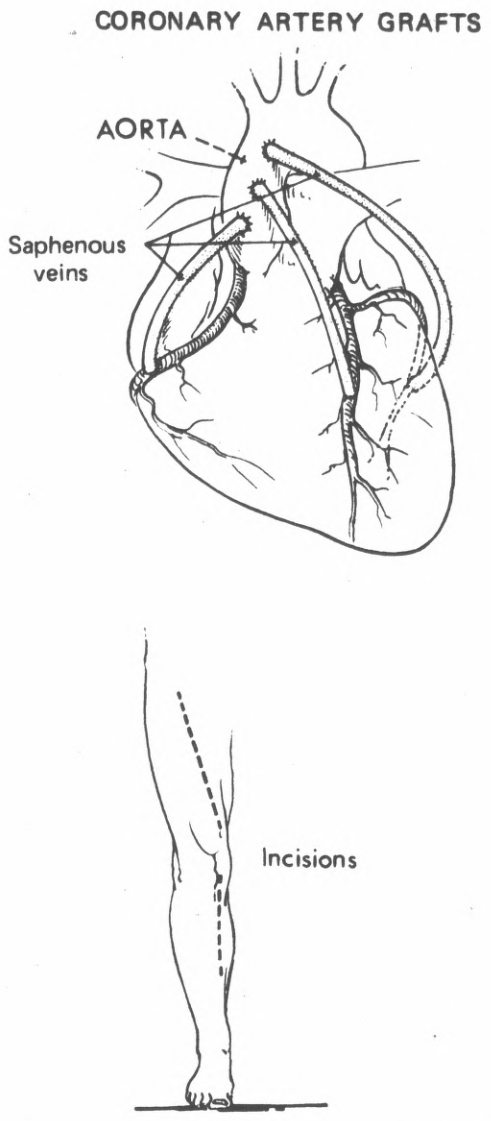
For some patients, medications may be the best treatment for heart disease. Medical management can mean that symptoms of physical distress from coronary artery disease will be relieved, but not necessarily eliminated.

A widely-publicized Veterans Administration national report recently published suggested that certain kinds of coronary artery disease patients do as well with medicines as with surgery. There are other reports by reputable physicians, however, that disagree with the VA study.

For many patients, surgery may be the best treatment.

THE SURGICAL procedure used to insure blood supply to the heart of a person with coronary artery disease is called a "coronary artery bypass." In the operating room, several different physician specialists work together with a large support staff of nurses and paramedical personnel.

As soon as the anesthetics have taken effect, the scrub nurse and members of the medical team disinfect the patient's skin near incision sites on the legs and chest, draping his body to cover and protect areas not involved in the surgery.



The saphenous vein, a superfluous vein in the leg will be used to bypass blocked coronary arteries. The rejection mechanisms are circumvented by the use of the patient's own tissue as a graft.

At the same time the surgeon is opening the chest by cutting through the breast bone with an electric saw, other members of the medical team are opening and extracting the veins from the patient's legs.

Once the chest is spread open, the surgeon and his team work together to insert the tubes connected to the heart pump, which will take over the work of the patient's heart. The patient's heartbeat is quieted to an ineffective flutter so the heart can rest while it is repaired.

THE SURGEON examines the arteries of the heart (they are only 2 to 3 millimeters in circumference at origin), checking his X-rays and test results against the actual conditions. He then sews the harvested leg veins to the tiny coronary arteries and the aorta to bypass the clogged or narrowed heart vessels.

It is not unusual for more arteries to be bypassed than the doctors had expected once the heart actually is examined.

Following surgery, the patient is taken directly to the Intensive Care Unit where he receives constant attention. When stable, the patient goes to the Transitional Care Unit where monitoring is less intensive than in ICU. Within two weeks, most patients are recuperating at home.

Patients from Mary's Help have told what the heart surgery experience has meant to them. Their words convey the half of the story left out by a mere clinical description of heart surgery procedures.

ON FEB. 9, his day off from work at a San Francisco newspaper, Leonard Gelardi, 45, was sitting on his couch in the living room of his Pacifica condominium, feeling fine. But when he leaned over to slip on his shoes, he started to perspire and feel weak; there was a pressure on his chest, but no pain.

He sat back, took a couple of deep breaths and thought about his heart. Today he considers himself lucky because he almost didn't call his doctor.

Nothing showed on his EKG, but some problems showed up three minutes into the rest period of his Treadmill Exercise test. A cardiac catheterization was scheduled.

"When I took the cardiac catheterization test," he says, "my cardiologist discovered the coronary blockages. Two of them were bad — 95 percent closed; two were less dangerous. I'm glad I got the warning before my heart was damaged during a heart attack.

"AFTER the cardiac catheterization test, my physicians told me that with the operation I had a 97 percent chance of survival and that with the blockages I had one chance in five of dying this year. I said, 'Let's do it.'

"My surgeon is a person who cares. That doctor stayed in the hospital with me all night. He really cares. I have nothing but the best to say for him and his surgical team."

About the procedure, Gelardi says, "It's an experience. I would prepare people for a lot of pain. They make you as comfortable as possible, but there's still a lot of pain. I've never experienced that kind of pain.

"Lying on my back was uncomfortable. So were the tubes in my stomach and in my throat. The thing that disturbed me most was being helpless in the hospital and the first week at home . . . Needing help getting my socks on . . . Having to have somebody watch me take a shower. I never liked that feeling of needing someone to care for me."

HEREDITY must have played an important role in the development of Gelardi's coronary artery disease. "My father died of a heart attack at 46," he said, "my mother had heart problems, but she died in a car accident at 32.

"My little sister had congenital heart problems, and she died at four months. They say today they could have saved her. My grandfather died of a heart attack. Most of the people in my family have had to be careful. I had uncles on both sides who died of heart attacks.

"That's why I consider myself lucky. Maybe if I take care of myself I'll have another 30 years. My father never took care of himself; my uncles never did. I can understand why their lives were so short.

"BUT AGAIN, in those days, nobody knew much about the heart. It's amazing when I think about what has been done for me that couldn't have been done for my father. Now, it's just a matter of healing.

"I survived and I feel pretty good about it. I want to get active again. I want to swim, ride my bicycle and walk with my dog on the beach."

Gelardi, who used to be a chef, also would like to get back to eating his special Italian dishes (many of them no longer available at restaurants today), but they are on his forbidden list. He's going to be concentrating on cutting down on meat and potato chips and learning to become even fonder than he already is of Japanese and Chinese food.

ARTHUR ZIROLL is a 58-year-old resident of South San Francisco whose blue eyes shine excitedly as he plans "a great new life ahead" from his hospital bed at Mary's Help.

He never had a heart attack. His only symptoms were chest pains and shortness of breath. He has been told that having a heart attack is like being hugged hard by a bear. He's never felt that hug and he never wants to.

When he first experienced chest pain about seven years ago, he called his company physician and asked if he should come over to his office. "Don't you go anywhere," the doctor replied. "I'll come to you."

That was the beginning of seven years of taking medications. When the pains came, he took nitroglycerine. Usually the pains disappeared within 15 minutes. But "A lot of things race through your mind," Ziroll said, "while you wait to see if it's going to run or going to stop."

AS HE made the decision to have surgery, he thought to himself, "This wouldn't be a bad move to make. The guy who works with me at United. He had a valve replacement. I didn't have a valve replacement, just three bypasses. I'm even getting out before I'm supposed to."

For almost the last 25 years, he has worked as a sheet metal mechanic at United Airlines. With a triple coronary bypass 10 days behind him, he dreams of going into the restaurant business after a few more years and working with his brother-in-law in Monterey or San Francisco.

Besides a new occupation, he looks forward to other changes now that he won't, as he says, "have these pains cropping up anymore."

HE LOOKS forward to bicycling with his 21-year-old daughter Tony and to swimming with his 16-year-old son Alex. He's giving up his motorcycle for a racing bike. "You get lots of wind and sun on a motorcycle, but you don't get much exercise," he says.

Don Fogliasso, highway superintendent for the State of California, Department of Transportation, will be the guest speaker on Monday at the monthly meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of Retired Person, Inc.

Servart Ojakian reports that Fogliasso, a resident of Broadmoor village, is an avid rockhound and a devotee of travel in his recreational vehicle. Daly City rockhounds know Fogliasso as the man who will chair the 14th annual Golden Gate Gem and Mineral Show when it is presented in the Westlake Park Community Center in October.

AARP members who had planned to go on the Solvang and Hearst Castle tour this month are asked to correct their calendars. The tour chairman, Mrs. Doris Johnson, has rescheduled the trip for Sept. 28-29. If you are interested in going please contact Mrs. Johnson.

AARP picnic tickets are being sold this Monday at the club meeting. The event will be held in the park at the Westlake Club House on September 11. Members may purchase tickets for $1.50.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman MacKinnon are recovering from "jet lag" and readjusting to driving on the right side of the road following a month long visit to Holland.

Marie MacKinnon, who left Holland as a young child, was making her third trip to her native land and her husband Norman enjoyed his second sojourn to that country.

Their junket, which started with a flight over the polar ice cap, included visits to many rural areas of the countryside and, before their return, the Mackinnon's had traveled from Holland's northermost providence to the southern boundary with Belgium and from the seaports to the eastern boarder with Germany. Having visited the tourist spots on their previous trip, the Mackinnons spent their time getting reacquainted with Marie's family. They toured extensively in the province of Friesland and went to the Friesen island of Terschelling and to Vlissinger in Zealand by the Sea and taking a brief cruise down the Rhine river.

Help Wanted

The following agencies have requested volunteer assistance from the Volunteer Bureau/Voluntary Action Center of San Mateo County, with offices in Burlingame, Daly City and Redwood City.

The local number for area residents is 992-0957, an answering service. Residents also may contact the main office in Burlingame at 342-0801, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SENIOR COASTSIDERS — A hula teacher is needed once a week to teach senior citizens at the center in Half Moon Bay for one hour per week. Reimbursement for transportation can be provided.

DIRECTION SERVICE — A tutor is needed for a woman unable to read or write in San Bruno. A reliable female is requested.

FOOD ADVISORY SERVICE — This group provides food to elderly homebound and needs volunteers to deliver fresh produce and other goods for about two hours a day. There are sites throughout San Mateo County.

DAY CAMP FOR THE HANDICAPPED — Volunteers still are needed for Session II which begins Aug. 14 and continues through Aug. 25, from 9:45 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. Monday through Friday. The camp is at Coyote Point Park in San Mateo.

MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION — Volunteers are needed for the Friendship Centers, which are a social rehabilitation program for individuals with mental or emotional difficulties. Volunteers assist in planning activities and providing a supportive atmosphere. Training is provided and centers are throughout San Mateo County.

For further information about these and other volunteer opportunities contact the Volunteer Bureau at the numbers listed. Interviews will be made in Daly City by appointment. A project of the Assistance League of San Mateo County, the Bureau shares in the United Way of the Bay Area and is funded, in part, by the County of San Mateo.

City Hall Cuts Hours

Shorter hours now are in effect at Daly City City Hall.

The public may visit or phone city departments only between 9 a.m. and noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. Previously, city offices were open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Only the Police Department and libraries will maintain the longer hours.

The City Council approved the reduced hours to permit City Hall to operate with a smaller staff.

July 28 was the last day of work for 212 part-time, temporary and Comprehensive and Employment Training Act employees. They were fired because of Proposition 13.

380 Corridor Should Remain

Sharp Park Road in Pacifica should be improved as soon as possible and the Freeway 380 corridor between Highway 1 and Skyline Boulevard should be retained as an optional east-west bypass.

Those recommendations are contained in the draft circulation element of the Pacifica General Plan now being prepared by planning consultant Robert Ironside.

The circulation document is required by the state and addresses policies related to traffic, pedestrian and bicycle circulation.

Several proposals for improved east-west access into the city are included.

Also addressed in the report is the recommendation that CalTrans provide a safe bypass of Devil's Slide and that residents be encouraged to use public transportation more often.

Several east-west alternatives were looked at, the report states, including extension of Linda Mar Boulevard or Fassler Avenue.

The extension of Linda Mar Boulevard through the Pedro Valley County Park, Sweeney Ridge and San Francisco Watershed to Skyline Boulevard would cost up to $23 million if it had been built in 1977.

Extending Fassler Avenue across Sweeney Ridge and watershed property to Skyline Boulevard would cost up to $18 million, the element states.

"The relatively high cost also precludes this alternative," according to the draft circulation element.

Another alternative is the Freeway 380 corridor, which would cost about $13 million to develop.

The report states that if 380 were built to connect Pacifica with Route 35, Sneath Lane, San Bruno Avenue and a road in Crestmoor Canyon would have to be improved to complete the link with Highway 280.

Because money is not available, "accomplishing this highway in the forseeable future does not seem likely," the element states.

Therefore, planners working on the circulation element have proposed that improving Sharp Park Road is the "most viable" of the alternatives.

CalTrans engineers have reviewed three alternatives: improving the road to four lanes ($4 million), relocating it to cross Sharp Park Golf Course into Fairway Park ($8 million) and building two westbound lanes on the north side of Gypsy Hill ($5 million).

The circulation report states that each alternative has its advantages and disadvantages, with the relocation of Sharp Park Road being the least desireable.

Another critical access problem for Pacifica, according to the planning consultants, is the realignment of Highway 1 over Devil's Slide.

A Devil's Slide bypass is on the inactive project list and is not included in CalTrans' current six-year budget, the report states.

"Because of high maintenance costs and inconvenience to the traveling public, a bypass of Devil's Slide eventually will be built," the report states.

"However," it continues, "unless the existing roadway fails altogether, it is unlikely that the new roadway will be available for at least five to 10 years."

North-south access in Pacifica also was mentioned in the circulation element.

"There is no viable alternative to the single north-south access within the city limits," the report states.

"The major question relating to north-south access is the capacity of Highway 1 and the impact of the highway on proposed land uses," according to the planners.

Because of heavy peak-hour congestion, a parallel road for emergency access into Pacifica should be built along Highway 1, Ironside proposes.

The final major access issue in Pacifica is access to the ridgelines, the report states.

"The basic issue is whether or not there should be development of the ridgelines," the planners continue. "Without access there will be no development, so access becomes a focus of discussion."

Red Tape Slows Search

By GEORGE GOLDING

Trying to get information out of Mexico, regarding the crash of a Peninsula citizen down there, is frustrating.

Even with the so-called help of the U.S. government.

So-called, because I formerly held the opinion that the U.S. government existed to help its citizens, not to hinder them.

What happened is a story made long by the refusal of agency after agency to answer letters; to pass on or even admit that information exists.

My file on James Ainsley is half an inch thick. And says almost nothing.

James Ainsley was a young man who grew up on the Peninsula, and who learned to fly planes.

He was acquainted with some other young men, Chris Taylor, Dennis Leung and Jim Lawrence of Burlingame.

Jim, Dennis and Chris took off in a twin-engined Cessna 320 (similar to a 310) from Santa Barbara airport July 13, 1976. The plane was piloted by Christine Davis. It was never seen again.

Nearly a year later, Chris' father, Tom Taylor, aided by an investigator from the National Transportation Safety Board, found a scrap of airplane in the Santa Barbara Channel. That scrap was identified as being from the missing plane.

Early this year, Tom Taylor came to me again.

Could I find out what happened to Jim Ainsley, one of his son's friends?

Jim had reportedly crashed in or near Mazatlan, Mexico, about January 13.

I wrote to Mexican authorities at Mazatlan. No answer. I contacted friends in the airline business. Nothing.

I wrote to the U.S. Consulate at Mazatlan. An answer, stating that my request had been referred to Washington. Not a clip from the local paper describing the accident, not a referral to the local Mexican police chief. Not even an admission that Jim Ainsley had ever been in Mazatlan.

Reason for this lack of information?

"The Freedom of Information Act."

Naturally, I responded by assaulting Washington, using all the wrong entryways at first.

I have letters from the State department, letters from Justice. I have two copies of a letter from State, dated six months after the crash, outlining the details.

"On January 13, the Consulate at Mazatlan received a telephone call from the Mayor of Concordia, Sinaloa, Mexico, reporting the crash of a small U.S. Aircraft, N-299WP, near El Verde, La Concepcion, Concordia, and the death of the pilot, James McFarlane Ainsley.

"The plane crashed about 20 miles from Concordia. In order to reach the crash site, local authorities had to cut a path with a machete for a half-mile through a rather jungle-like area. The accident scene revealed the burnt aircraft with the tail number still intact. Mr. Ainsley's body was found approximately 20 meters from the burned aircraft. According to the local coroner, Mr. Ainsley died as the result of multiple injuries sustained in the crash.

"The date of the crash was not determined by local authorities. Although they believe the accident occurred on January 12, the undertaker believes (from the state of the body) that the accident probably occurred several days prior to its discovery."

For those of you who knew Jim Ainsley in Burlingame, Redwood City or La Honda, that's the official word.

As an epitaph, it's not much.

As an aircraft accident report, it's not much either.

SPEAKING of accidents, are you glad you weren't riding in car at Livermore last weekend, the one Grace Page put a plane's wheel through the window of?

What a way to build a reputation.

She's been flying for years, struggling for recognition. Now she has it, as the woman stunt pilot who smashed into a car.

Tough apples, but I still say she's a heck of a flyer.

BOEING'S latest experimental short-haul research aircraft, a high-wing job with four engines on top, was due at Moffett Field this week for a coupla years at Ames Research Labs.

QSRA, for "quiet short-haul research aircraft," is a deHavilland "Buffalo" with new wing and engines.

LADY came in the other day and asked what that big plane was, that was spending so much time flying over the Bay. She wondered if it was an airliner that couldn't land for some reason, and why it came back one evening if it hadn't been able to land the night before?

What it is, is an FAA test plane that flies back and forth to make sure signals are being transmitted from various devices, correctly.

UNITED would never tell, but Howard D. Putnam, 41, vice president for marketing, is leaving United Airlines to work for another company.

Putnam will be president and chief executive officer for Southwest Airlines, effective Aug. 21.

William Speicher, 41, Great Lakes regional vice president for United, will move into Putnam's job.

THE U.S. Department of Transportation has announced a rather loose schedule for replacing existing radio-nav aids, (those being checked by the big white plane mentioned above,) with MLS devices approved this summer.

Prototype development and testing will take until 1982.

Replacement of existing ILS equipment will take 30 years, depending on how quickly our international neighbors are willing to move on replacing their equipment with MLS.

Meanwhile, existing systems will be modernized, an economical thing to do.

That recommendation was made by Systems Control, of Palo Alto.

BRIEFINGS will be held in Washington Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 8 and 9, to advise aviation organizations and the general public on the status of major research and development programs including MLS.

Also on the agenda, air traffic control system improvements, automation of flight service stations, weather detection, collision avoidance and helicopter IFR.

HELICOPTER IFR is one of those is ideas whose time has come, despite the foot-dragging of officialdom.

I've known 'copter drivers for years who have always told me helicopters could fly IFR (or instrument flight rules) as well as any airplane with fixed wings. They also said the FAA wouldn't let them fly IFR.

More recently, helicopter builders have been offering their machines equipped for flying by instrument alone.

Apparently the commercial pressure is bringing the foot-draggers up to speed.

"IFR," according to ground school teacher Dale Kuhns, means "I Follow Railroads," an old-fashioned method of navigating when clouds got low. Another slogan was "low and slow."

That kind of "IFR" occasionally led to some pilot pranging into the side of a mountain when the railroad disappeared into a tunnel.

Today's IFR pilot usually flies as high as possible and seldom runs into the tops of railroad tunnels, but the phrase still has an ironic ring to it.

AIRPORT Development funds totalling $167 million have been divvied up among U.S. airfields during the third quarter of fiscal '78.

Now you know why so many airfields in apparently out-of-the-way places have nice paving, modern chain-link fencing all around, and other goodies.

This sum went from the Fed. Department of Transportation to 67 general aviation airports ($16 million), 10 "releiver airports," ($4.4 million), and 161 air carrier airports ($128 million.)

A NOTE for travellers:

According to Pan Am, credit cards are not currently acceptable in Afghanistan. Take cash only.

The world-wide airline is also now serving the domestic market between Houston and New York. Part of a New York-Mexico City flight.

UNITED reports SFO passenger boardings up 27 percent during June. To date this year, passenger traffic is up 17 percent.

ACCORDING to airport boss Dick Heath, the local aerodrome shows a passenger increase of 10.8 percent for the fiscal year 77-78, while flight operations increased less than 3.2 percent.

Cargo is up 12.6 percent for the year, and mail is up 6.4 percent.

Thirty-two airlines now operate out of San Francisco International:

Air California, Air Canada, Air Charter West, Airlift International, American Airlines, Braniff International, British Airways, Canadian Pacific Airlines, China Airlines, Continental Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Edson Air Systems, Eureka Aero, Federal Express, Flying Tiger Lines, Hughes Airwest, Japan Air Lines, National Airlines, Nor Cal Airlines, Northwest Airlines, Pacific Southwest Airlines, Pan American World Airways, Philippine Airlines, Professional Air Charter, Qantas Airways, Singapore Airlines, Stol Air, Swift Aire, Trans World Airlines, United Airlines, Western Airlines and Yosemite Airlines.

Heath said total operations showed a 3.19 percent hike, but jet operations were only up 2 percent.

Increased use of wide-bodied jets, which are quieter, and higher passenger loading, are factors, he said.

"General aviation," which means smallplanes, increased 32.24 percent during the year.

Use of the airport garage went up 4.6 percent during the year. Heath said this small growth is due to increased use of SamTrans by San Mateo county residents.

(I suggest it is also possibly due to the fact that the garage area is always under construction. Surely this confusion must put some people off.)

THE LATEST study of Concorde noise at New York indicates an average noise increase of zero to 2 decibels at various points around JFK compared to pre-Concorde days.

Citizen complaints about the supersonic plane rose to 663 during June, accounting for half the noise squawks received at JFK.

CHANTING WELCOME

Members of the Hare Krishna sect swarmed through San Francisco International Airport corridors Thursday in the wake of their leading Holy Man, Tridandi Goswami Hansadutta Swami, spiritual leader of the movement for Northwestern United States and Southern India. Hansadutta Swami came to the Bay Area to lead the celebration of the group's big "Chariot Festival" this weekend in Golden Gate Park.

'God's Secretary' Splashy Arrival

By GEORGE GOLDING

"Hare Krishnaaa, Hare Krishnaaa," chanted 45 robed and gowned young men and women Thursday as Tridandi Goswami Hansadutta Swami arrived at San Francisco International Airport.

United Airlines employees and passengers awaiting departing flights stared in amazement as chants got louder and louder and the Hare Krishnas began jigging up and down and dancing, backed by bongo-like "khole" drums and hand-held brass cymbals.

Swami Hansadutta, the spiritual leader of the Krishna movement for Northwestern United States and Southern India, is here for the Bay Area Festival of the Chariots this weekend in Golden Gate Park.

Thousands, of Hare Krishna followers are expected to turn out.

Swami Ramsadutta, a native of Queens, N.Y., will preside, as he did Thursday at a brief religious ceremony in United's Aloha Room shortly after arriving.

First, the swami was pelted with flower petals by his chanting and dancing co-believers as he departed the plane from Los Angeles.

Then he led them through the corridors, past a moving sidewalk, through a security checkpoint, to the airline's hospitality room in another corridor.

Behind, the arrival lounge was littered with flowers.

A Hare Krishna said the significance of throwing flower petals is that God made every nice thing, and this is a means of sharing nice things that God made.

United Airlines employees suggested they could have survived without being asked to share, at least in cleaning up the flowers.

By that time, however, Swami Hansadutta had entered the Aloha room, his followers had kneeled and held their heads to the carpeted floor, and the Swami was conducting a service.

Then he conducted a press conference explaining his presence in the Bay Area.

He described his role as representative or "secretary" to God.

One of his co-believers, Charu Das, said there are 11 who share world leadership for the movement.

Swami Hansadutta said he had founded the Hare Krishna center in Berkeley a year or so after he joined the movement in New York in 1967.

He has been away from the United States for 10 years, he said, founding other centers in Germany, Canada, Sweden, Eastern European countries and Russia.

He said sin is due to ignorance, and it is the Hare Krishna role to chant the lord's name, to distribute foodstuffs to the lord and to distribute literature.

His robed flock sat comfortably on the floor, smiling easily and laughing from time to time as the Swami swapped quips with reporters.

"One thing you can say about Hare Krishnas," said a robed man who wore his hair about the same length as a World War II soldier, "they are always happy."

Most of the men, wrapped in near-white robes and pajamalike costumes, had shaven heads except for a round circle of hair in the back.

The women wore robes of various colors with cowls over their heads.

A couple carried babies.

Swami Hansadutta said there are several phases to life in the religion, including periods when relations with others are foresworn, and other periods when it is permissible to be married.

Asked if he had been married, he said yes. He said he had since entered the fourth stage of life, which involves putting away families, friends and business. His former wife lives in New York, he said.

Asked if he missed her, he said no.

His followers laughed, as though they shared some insight into the swami's situation that reporters didn't know

County Slayers Seek Freedom

By DUANE SANDUL

Six of the most infamous criminals in county history, including five murderers, are preparing to try to convince prison officials to give them parole dates.

District Attorney Keith C. Sorenson today vowed to fight to keep each man behind bars.

The list includes Zachary Ford Lillard, the convicted slayer of San Mateo policeman Gordon Joinville in 1968, and Ronald Paul Martin, the murderer of a nightclub singer in San Mateo 10 years ago this week.

Lillard and Martin each had been sentenced to death in the gas chamber but each escaped with his life when the California Supreme Court first declared the state's death penalty law unconstitutional.

The law has since been changed to allow capital punishment.

Sorenson said that he would personally lead the fight to keep Lillard in prison.

The district attorney announced that for the first time the law allows prosecutors to appear at parole hearings.

Previously, the attorney general's office represented the "people."

Many times the status of a case was not reported to the county in which the crime occurred.

Sorenson said that each of the six convicts has a date for a hearing before the state Community Release Board, which was established 13 months ago to replace the Parole Board.

Martin, convicted for the bloody slaying of singer Brenda Gregory, faces the board Aug. 16 at the Vacaville Medical Center.

Martin killed Mrs. Gregory after he said he interpreted her smile to mean that she wanted to be killed. She had stopped for gasoline at a service station for which Martin worked.

Sorenson said that he would sent his assistant, William Larsen, to argue that Martin should not be given a parole date because he is a two-time murderer. He killed a Japanese woman a few years before the Gregory slaying.

Lillard, who nearly won a parole date last year, will try again Sept. 12 at the state's Men's Colony at San Luis Obispo.

Lillard, now 45, killed Joinville in May of 1968.

Joinville had been "tailing" Lillard as a possible narcotics suspect when he was mortally wounded in his undercover car.

Other criminals and their parole dates are:

• Matthew Loncaric, now 36, convicted for the February 1968 mallet slaying of 74-year-old San Bruno gunsmith Orville Spork. His hearing is Aug. 30 at San Quentin.

• Clarence Galindo, now 27, convicted for the June 1969 slaying of 86-year-old pensioner Christian Pedersen, a retired Pacifica sea captain. His hearing is Aug. 30.

• Jorge Valeriano, now 27, convicted for the February 1971 slaying of Burlingame druggist Aran Ojakian. The hearing is Aug. 22 at Tracy.

• Michael Poulin, now 36, the first convicted bomber who faced the possibility of the death penalty under new state law aimed at deterring bombings. A judge sentenced Poulin to life imprisonment instead.

Poulin was found guilty of planting an explosive device at the Leonard Clarenbach home in San Carlos in December 1970.

It exploded and Clarenbach was injured. It was alleged that Poulin planted the bom as an act of revenge because Clarenbach's stepdaughter had broken off a relationship with him.

His hearing is scheduled for an undetermined date in October.

"It frightens me to see them up for parole," Sorenson said of the cases.

Judges Won't Turn Back Pay Increase

Judges don't always agree on everything, but when it comes to wages, there's unity among the judiciary in San Mateo County.

None of the municipal or superior court judges have indicated an interest in joining a few scattered judges throughout California in giving back their 5 percent pay raises.

Judges were among the few government employees to escape a salary freeze imposed by Gov. Edmund J. Brown Jr., in the aftermath of Proposition 13.

Their pay had been frozen for 22 months preceding July 1, though.

The governor, as well as state Supreme Court Chief Justice Rose Bird, had urged judges to "set an example" by declining their pay raises.

Superior court judges are now paid $51,624 annually. Municipal court judges receive $49,166.

According to Presiding San Mateo County Superior Court Judge Walter P. Capaccioli, the state's procedure for "returning" the pay increase would wind up costing the judges more money than the raise.

The state will not allow county controllers to exclude the amount of the pay raise from paychecks, but encourages judges to return the increase, according to Capaccioli.

But the judge would have to pay taxes on the income, as well as retirement payments mandated by state law.

"It would result in a pay reduction," Capaccioli said.

Capaccioli said that in his personal situation, he has two children in college, so a pay raise helps some.

"I earn every penny of it," said Superior Court Judge Melvin E. Cohn, a former three-time presiding judge. He said that the raise, after federal and state taxes, amounts to $92 per month.

"I intend to keep my raise," said Superior Court Judge Robert D. Miller. "It'll buy me a couple of cartons of cigarettes."

"We won't be giving ours back," said Superior Court Judge William Lanam, who added that Rose Bird's gesture of returning pay wages "would be more meaningful" if she were paid the salary of a trial judge.

Superior Court Judge Gerald Ragan said that he was seriously considering returning his raise as an example to encourage industry and labor to keep down wages and prices.

"But then when we learned that we had to pay taxes on the income anyway," Ragan said, he changed his mind.

'Other factors to consider include the way the cost of living has increased since our last raise 22 months ago," Ragan said.

Municipal Court Judge Thomas McGinn Smith has said, "When my ex-wife gives up part of her alimony, I'll give up part of my salary."

Private Fund for Services

San Mateo County Supervisor John Ward announced today the creation of a private fund to which individuals and businesses can contribute to bolster county services, particularly parks and libraries, cut as a post-Jarvis cost saving measure.

Joining in the announcement were representatives of the Governmental Research Council and the private San Mateo Foundation.

Larry Armstrong, executive director of GRC, a local government watchdog organization comprised mostly of businessmen, said he and other GRC members would solicit donations from businesses.

William Somerville, executive director of the foundation, said a "special parks, libraries and community services fund" would be established by the foundation to accept donations.

Beginning today, persons interested in helping restore cutbacks made in a variety of county programs and services can send their tax-deductible checks to the foundation, 1204 Burlingame Ave., Burlingame.

Ward noted today that the Jarvis initiative had forced the Board of Supervisors to make reductions in a number of "popular" county programs, including the parks and recreation, libraries and the animal control.

He said he personally had received up to 50 telephone calls from county residents concerned about the budget reductions in the three programs alone.

During three rounds of Jarvis budget review sessions, the supervisors closed three county library branches and reduced the opening hours of the remaining 11 branches; closed several small county park units; and reduced substantially its subvention to the Peninsula Humane Society, which contracts with the county for animal control.

"This special fund," Ward noted, "will allow the private sector to help at a time when we (government) can no longer provide the kind of funding the people are used to."

The fund, the supervisor added, will permit businesses and individuals, recipients of some property tax savings as a result of Jarvis-Gann, to personally help with the financing of programs and services they have enjoyed in the past.

Ward cited for example the Woodside Store and the Sanchez Adobe in Pacifica, both historical landmarks closed this year by the board, as two park units that donations could help finance.

Somerville said money donated to the fund would be administered by a five-member foundation "disbursement committee."

Committee members include Albert Horn, appointed by the president of Stanford University; Robert Koshland, appointed by the presiding judge of the San Mateo County Superior Court; Aubrey Lee, appointed by the president of the United Way of the Bay Area; Walter Truce, appointed by trustee banks; and Mrs. Mynderse Van Hoesen, appointed by the president of Mills College.

The County Board of Supervisors or the governing board of any public agency will be allowed to make requests for the private funds, based on recommendations by such municipal or county departments as libraries and parks and recreation.

The disbursement committee, according to Somerville, will evaluate the requests and make a decision on appropriations.

The San Mateo Foundation, Somerville, said, was established in 1964.

The 'Blue' in 'Blue and Gold' Is Back

Perspective

By ARVILLE FINACOM

Did you notice how bright and blue the Bay was in early summer? Seeing it against the dry-grassed golden hills one didn't need to wonder why California's state colors are blue and gold.

In recent years San Francisco Bay hasn't always seemed so blue. Sometimes its polluted murkiness appeared through reddish-brown smog, all brilliance dulled to a uniform slate grey. But this year, along with ample winter and spring rains to flush its depths, moderate to heavy spring winds to clear the smoke and dust from the air above it, and a series of weak storm fronts moving mountainward around the end of June and early in July, the Bay bloomed blue.

IN THE middle 60s few local residents held out much hope for such a return of the Bay's brilliance. In the 20-year period beginning in 1947, its waters were deluged steadily with malodorous industrial and residential sewage water which contaminated and killed shellfish and made the Bay unfit for swimming and virtually every other recreational activity.

In addition, Bay edge marshland and tidal flats were filled systematically with rock and dirt which not only destroyed vital Pacific Flyway estuarine wildfood habits, but destroyed lush stands of oxygen producing, carbon dioxide-consuming, cord grass.It seemed to conservationists, as Peninsula cities raced to dredge and fill and East Bay cities did the same, the question was becoming "S.F. Bay or river?"

FINALLY the issue could be ignored no longer and groups such as the Sierra Club and the ad hoc "Save San Francisco Bay Association" pressured state legislators to establish a joint powers commission with authority over all San Francisco Bay use. The Bay Conservation and Development Commission, created in 1965 to do a three-year study of the area and develop a "Bay Plan," became a permanent commission in 1969 charged with protecting the Bay in the public interest, specifically by controlling permits for Bay filliing, dredging, shoreline construction and/or alteration within a 100-foot strip immediately inland from Bay water.

Another state agency, the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board, is charged with developing comprehensive water quality controls. So effective have its measures been coupled with those of BCDC that runs of striped bass have become more common in Bay waters and even the delicate Bay shrimp, which once supported a thriving Chinese fishing industry in many places along the shore, including Hunter's Point, is coming back in quantities almost sufficient to make commercial harvesting ecologically as well as economically feasible.

Ten years ago few fishermen tried their luck on the Bayshore in San Mateo County. Along with polluted waters limiting the number and quality of fish available, there were few public access spots. Today, in the north county, as a result of BCDC's Public Access Project initiated in 1976, there are now some 11 sites between Brisbane and San Mateo that offer fishing, biking, hiking, bird watching and Bay views. South of San Mateo are eight more. All are part of some 75 miles of bay shoreline now open to public access.

STARTING almost on the Brisbane/South San Francisco line, there are three areas: a shoreline strip at the end of Forbes Boulevard on Point San Bruno, a shoreline path north of Oyster Point Boulevard, and the Oyster Point Marina.

Understandably, there is no public access along the Bayside edge of San Francisco Airport, but at its southeastern corner overlooking a small unfilled arm of the Bay at the mouth of Millbrae Creek there is a viewing area where one can park to watch flesh and feather fowl or metal mechanical ones at rest and in flight.

Walking south along the shore, one parallels Airport Boulevard until commercial development begins. There the path turns Bayward; one can walk dry-footed along the very edge of the Bay behind Tia Maria and the Vagabond Motel. Such public access behind private commercial developments is a BCDC condition for permit-to-build approval. Owners are requested as well to improve the site. One of the newest areas lies immediately bayward of the new Benihana of Tokyo Restaurant. Here one may follow marked walkways or rest on rustic benches and observe activity in the adjacent posted Burlingame Shore Bird Sanctuary at the mouth of Mills Creek.

CONTINUING down the Bay, across Anza Blvd. from Burlingame's Bayside Park, is a tiny, tidal marsh and a small developed park accessible only by foot or bicycle since there is no convenient automobile parking. From there, the bicycle path/walkway follows Anza Boulevard along the Bay edge where duck blinds accessible only by boat await winter hunters 100 or so yards offshore.

Just as Anza Boulevard turns sharply inland, skirting the edge of the cove along which Coyote Point Beach extends, one finds Fisherman's Park, a favorite lunchtime relaxation spot for many who bait hooks, dangle them from poles anchored in the riprap, then munch on sandwiches, listen to the radio or chat with acquaintances.

Coyote Point Beach extends the full length of the cove, although few use the portion not easily accessible by car. The water is cold and elatively clean, but one does have to be careful of the squishy stickiness of the clay-like Bay mud only a few inches below the imported sand and gravel topping.

AROUND Coyote Point itself and beyond the boat marina, one can travel nearly a mile along an elevated bicycle and pedestrian trail to the mouth of San Mateo Creek. Offshore, pelicans and comorants perch on pilings between fishing excursions.

Back in 1957, when only a few far-sighted conservationists seemed to see any real threat to the Bay, writer Harold Gilliam wrote "The Bay is not only useful as a harbor; it has other functions as well. It is in effect a huge untrodden park, offering space, perspective, and beauty — items which are not usually visible on a balance sheet and which will inevitably become increasingly rare as California's population increases."

I'm glad that there were voices such as Gilliam's heeded, that BCDC was created and that government and private industry both are being held responsible for giving the five million of us who reside along its shores a cleaner, healthier, more wholesome San Francisco Bay.

TO INSURE that it stays that way, perhaps even becomes more healthful, the nonprofit Save San Francisco Bay Association acts as ombudsman. If you are interested, find out how you can help by writing Save SF Bay, P.O. Box 925, Berkeley 94701. It's one way to say "thank you."

THE DIET CORNER

By ELISE GENDAR

The dog days of August . . . we all say it as if there was something terribly wrong with being a dog. Well, compare, please, the approach taken in advertisements for dog food on television and in the press compared with the advertisements for children's food to which our younger generation is subjected.

The inference is that people care more about the vitamins and minerals that go to work building strong puppy bones and shining, glossy coats than they do about the nutrients needed to grow strong children's teeth and a healthy head of hair. Saturday mornings the networks flaunt hours of junk foods that stress yummy tastes and contribute nothing to the future but a mouthful of cavities.

NOW, I don't for one minute think that as a nation we really care more for our pets than we do for our children, but what would a Martian think if his little green antennae bugged into some of these gems of the advertising mind? He'd whisk off to his native planet convinced that we cherish our dogs and let our kids grow willy-nilly.

How does your kindergarten grow? Do you teach your children to clean their plates or do you advise them to stop when they have had enough? Do you promise dessert as a reward for eating unnecessary food? Do you make certain the cookie jar is always full and the fruit bowl empty? Do you always serve potatoes and never offer fresh vegetables?

Do you pander to the hamburger and catsup set, or do you insist that the growing taste buds accommodate themselves to new experiences? If you are accentuating the negative in nutrition, stop. Begin today with a real meal that includes such good ingredients as this:

HEAVENLY FRUIT

1 cup plain yogurt
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup strawberry low-cal soda
⅛ cup evaporated skim milk (well chilled)
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon strawberry flavoring
3 packages artificial sweetener
Few drops red food coloring
1 small banana diced
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup pineapple chunks, canned in own juice and drained well
1 orange peeled, cut into small pieces

Sprinkle gelatin in soda to soften gelatin. Place over low heat until gelatin is dissolved. Put in refrigerator until mixture is syrupy. Whip chilled skim milk until thick, add vanilla, strawberry flavoring, sweetener, food coloring and beat until very thick.

Pour in syrupy gelatin, beating until light and fluffy. Put lemon juice over diced banana, stir in rest of fruits and the yogurt. Gently fold whipped cream and fruit mixture together. Chill at least one hour. Serves 6.

Good morning, good cooks.

From somewhere over the rainbow came this idea for Fruited Rainbow Pie, a glamorous dessert that's easy to do. Clouds of vanilla ice cream and tart orange sherbet crown a gingersnap crust. The topping consists of pineapple chunks, strawberries and green grape halves. It's spooned over the ice cream just before serving.

Fruited Rainbow Pie is a smashing dessert for an elegant dinner party, but also fits those occasions that call for only dessert and coffee or a sophisticated luncheon.

NO ONE, except the hostess, can guess at the practicality and ease of preparing this dessert. Rolled gingersnaps mix with a bit of sugar and butter for the easy crust. It's baked five minutes. When cool and chilled, swirl the ice cream and sherbet alternately into the crust. This much can be wrapped and frozen since the fruit and berries are added just prior to serving.

Here's a tip for loosening the crust: After removing from freezer, dip the bottom of the pie plate in water to loosen it.

FRUITED RAINBOW PIE

1⅛ cups gingersnap crumps (about 20 gingersnaps)
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, melted

FILLING:

1 quart vanilla ice cream
1 pint orange sherbet

TOPPING:

½ cup pineapple chunks in unsweetened pineapple juice, drained
½ cup fresh strawberries, sliced
½ cup green grapes, halved and seeded
¼ cup Cointreau orange juice

To prepare crust: Mix together 1-1/3 cups crumbs and 3 tablespoons sugar; stir in ¼ cup melted butter. Press mixture firmly and evenly against bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate, building up slightly around rim. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 5 minutes. Cool, then chill crust in freezer.

To prepare filling: Spoon 1 quart ice cream alternately with 1 pint sherbet into crust to give a swirled appearance. Return to freezer.

To prepare topping: In a small bowl combine ½ cup pineapple, ½ cup strawberries, and ½ cup grapes. Toss with ¼ cup Cointreau or orange juice; chill 1 hour. Just before serving spoon fruit over Menopause in Animals?

By DR. BARNETT, D.V.M.

QUESTION: Do dogs and cats (I am especially interested in cats) go through symptoms of middle age that could be compared to menopause in humans (females)? Does spaying prevent this, if it does occur? —D.E.

ANSWER: Dogs and cats do not experience menopause as do humans. Spaying has many advantages, including lowering the incidence of mammary tumors, controlling heat periods, population control, etc., and, of course, I recommend it very highly. Preventing menopause is not one of the advantages of spaying, since it does not occur in animals as it does in hhumans.

QUESTION: I have a 5-month-old Cairn terrier with a real annoying problem — flatulence. This can be without any reason and overpowering. He is fed the recommended diet and has had enzyme pills without good results. I once read that a little antacid once a day is good for the digestive tract — but wouldn't this make him very loose? The gas is bad enough without more problems. What would you advise? The dog is frisky, alert and full of energy. —R.K.M.

ANSWER: Feeding small quantities several times daily might help, also you might try another diet of good quality. Antacids in small quantities might be helpful and you can watch to see if diarrhea results. I don't know if they would help the gas but they would be worth a try.

Flatulence is a very annoying problem and usually is associated with incomplete digestion of the food. However, in most cases the dog is quite healthy even though his problem seems to make it unhealthy for anyone near him. Enzyme tablets often are helpful but not always, as you know.

Perhaps if you tried a very bland diet such as baby food (meat) for a few days only, and if the problem improves then you could ask your veterinarian for a commercially-prepared bland diet for dogs and use it for an extended period.

QUESTION: Our dog has an allergy and we found it expensive to take her in for shots which do help. We also have pills and most recently were told by a friend that honey was good for allergies — this we are trying now. In the National Enquirer a Dr. Richard L. Dobsen reported in the AMA Journal that aspirin can relieve itching. Do you think we might try aspirin for our dog? —L.G.

ANSWER: Aspirin can be very irritating to the lining of a dog's stomach and can cause severe problems (in cats it can be fatal). To my knowledge aspirin does not help allergies in dogs so I would not recommend it. I have no knowledge of the benefits of honey in treating these conditions, but at least the dog would get some nutrition and no ill effects from its use.

The Gamesman

Empire-Building

By RICHARD C. MOON

Avalon Hill is a publisher that prides itself on the authenticity of its simulation games. Since 1958, when the company introduced Tactic II, this company has been a leader in conflict simulation games, or, war games. Avalon Hill also publishes a line of games that mirror other aspects of life such as sports, business and historic events.

Before Avalon Hill came on the scene, most proprietary games were abstract in nature and depended in part on luck to determine the winner. Avalon deviated from the traditional formula and devised a method of transferring the abstract to real life. Instead of moving a token, players of war-games moved representations of divisions of infantry in accordance with "real life" historical situations.

ONE OF the most notable characteristics of all of these simulation games is that they demand something extra from players. The rules are not always simple so they often require patience and a little study. The games are sophisticated in concept and design, fascinating, challenging and intriguing.

One of the newest of Avalon Hill's 70-plus games is Rail Baron. For anyone who has dreamed of building railroad empires, this game is guaranteed to feed such a fantasy.

With Rail Baron one is taken back to the age when the blood of this nation flowed through the railroads. The era that created giants such as Jay Gould and Cornelius Vanderbilt is the setting, as the players wield great power, while struggling to build empires at the expense of their rivals.

RAIL BARON is designed for three to six players, ages 10 and up. As with many fine games, though Rail Baron appears simple on the surface, it contains many subtleties that allow participants to exercise their own business wizardry.

Players start with $20,000 and a train. By taking "trips," players earn enough money to buy such important lines as the B&O and C&O. By planning carefully, a player's fortune can continue to grow while his opponents go bankrupt. The first to accumulate $200,000 wins the game.

Rail Baron is played on an attractive mapboard that unfolds to represent the entire United States during the glorious days of railroading. Twenty-eight major rail lines are shown along with the major cities they connected.

THOUGH IT may take as long as three to four hours to grow from a promising financial genius into supreme Rail Baron and game winner, there is great fun in doing so. And if you're a person who enjoys a challenge and likes the idea of building an empire, Rail Baron may be just what you're looking for.

Westmoor HS Registrations

The Westmoor High School administration staff will register students who are new to the school by appointment on Aug. 16,22, 23 and 29. Late registration will be Sept. 5.

This service will be available on an appointment basis and students may telephone the school at 756-3434 for an appointment. Students are to bring transfer papers and/or their most recent report card from the last school attended to assist with their registration.

All students new to Westmoor also are invited to the school's annual Orientation Assembly in the Main Gym Aug. 31 from 8:30 to 10 a.m.

Orientation is designed primarily for the incoming freshmen, but all students entering Westmoor in the fall who are unfamiliar with the school are welcome. Schedules of class assignments will be distributed to freshmen at this time.

The members of the Westmoor Executive Board will be in charge of the orientation this year under the direction of Angela Rizzo, student body president. The Rally Committee will also be on hand to welcome the students.

Following the assembly the students will break up into small groups for a question-answer session and to receive their schedule of classes for 1978-79; then they will tour the school.

Westmoor class schedules for the coming year will be mailed to presently enrolled 10th, 11th and 12th-grade students' homes the week of Aug. 21, according to Pablo Perez, vice principal guidance.

Mary's Help Joins Cost-Cutting Program

Mary's Help Hospital in Daly City recently has been designated a certified cost containment hospital by the California Voluntary Effort, Rex G. Chase, executive director of the hospital, has announced.

"What this means," Chase said, "is that Mary's Help is playing its part in the nationwide effort to reduce hospital costs." The California Voluntary Effort (CVE) is the state affiliate of a nationwide program initiated by America's hospital and medical leadership to slow down the rate of increased health care expenditures.

The Voluntary Effort is sponsored nationally by the American Hospital Association, the American Medical Association, the Federation of American Hospitals, the Health Insurance Industry Manufacturers Association, the National Association of County Officials and advocates of business and consumer viewpoints.

The goal of the Voluntary Effort is to contain health care costs, consistent with sound medical practice. Specifically, hospitals are being asked to reduce the rate of increase in hospital costs by two percentage points during 1978 and 1979.

In addition, hospitals are being asked to heighten productivity, tighten utilization review controls by which hospitals evaluate the care provided and the length of stay, accelerate current efforts to improve the health care delivery system through multi-hospital systems and shared services, and limit increases in hospital bedding and capital investments.

To become certified, Mary's Help Hospital's Board of Directors and medical-dental staff passed resolutions supporting the California Voluntary Effort and agreed to participate in data collection actitivities sponsored by the CVE State Steering Committee.

Chase noted that cost containment efforts already are having visible results with a clear trend at both state and national levels toward moderation of hospital and health care costs.

Statistics Show the Babe's Real Claim to Fame

Le Pacini

This is Baseball Statistics and Other Oddities Day.

Just a few things I've gathered during my periodical perusing of dusty, and even some new, tomes. Things that, for whatever peculiar reasons, fascinate me. I hope they do you, too. Otherwise, read the book reviews and recipe columns this week and improve your culture.

So you think all of Babe Ruth's significant records have been broken? The Babe still holds the highest lifetime slugging average, a seemingly impossible .690, and the highest single season slugging average, a TRULY impossible. 847. He also led the league in slugging average 13 times.

TRY TO grasp the significance of those figures. Henry Aaron's lifetime slugging average was .559. His best single season was .669, 21 points lower than Ruth's career average. Willie Mays' lifetime SA was .557, his best single season, .667.

When Roger Maris hit his 61 homers in 1961, his SA was .620, his best ever. When the Babe hit his 60 in 1927, his SA was .772, which was only his third best seasonal SA — also the third best in history. Babe, in fact, has the three top single season SA's in history — .847 (1920), .846 (1921), and that .772. He also has the fifth best, his string being broken by Lou Gerhrig's .765 in 1927.

In fact, Ruth has six of the 10 best single season SA's (only Gehrig, Rogers Hornsby, Jimmie Foxx and Ted Williams share any of the top 10 spots with Ruth): nine of the top 23. Only Gehrig and Foxx went into the top 23 as many as three times. Hornsby and Williams each made the top 23 twice.

HOW DID Ruth get that sensational .847? He hit .376 with 36 doubles, nine triples and 54 home runs. The next season, when he had the .846, he hit .378, which included 204 hits, 44 of them doubles, 16 triples, 59 homers. The reason why the SA was slightly lower than the season before was that he was up about 100 more times. Incidentally, Babe also threw in 17 stolen bases and won two games as a pitcher.

The man closest to Ruth in lifetime SA is Ted Williams, with .634. He's followed by Gehrig (.632), Foxx (.609), Hank Greenberg (.605), Joe DiMaggio (.579), Hornsby (.577), Johnny Mize (.562), Stan Musial (.599) and Mays and Mickey Mantle (.557).

Aaron just misses the top 10 with a .555. Of the currently active players, only Willie McCovey (.531) and Willie Stargell (5.29) make the Top 25. They are 23rd and 24th, respectively. Recently retired Dick Allen is 17th, with a .539.

A PARTICULARLY interesting stat to me is on-base average, and in this category Ted Williams leads, though many of you might have thought, as did I, that Ruth did. Williams got on base 48.3 percent of the times he went to bat. Ruth is second at 47.4. Surprisingly, John McGraw, who made the Hall of Fame more for his managing of the Giants than for his playing, is third in that category, getting on base 46.6 percent of the time.

Others in the top 10 are Slidin' Billy Hamilton (45.7), Gehrig (44.7), Hornsby (43.4), Ty Cobb (43.3), Foxx (43.0), Tris Speaker (42.7), and my old San Francisco Seals-Athletics hero, Ferris Fain (42.5).

Williams also is tops in this category for one season. In 1941, the year he hit .406, he was on base a fantastic 55.1 percent of the time. The second best on-base season of all time belongs jointly to McGraw and Ruth (54.5), which they did in 1899 and 1923, respectively. In his own way, though, Ruth also dominates this category. He has five of the top 11 single-season totals, seven of the top 22. Williams has six of the best 22 one-season records.

CONTRASTING with those players who get on base, there are those players who don't allow men to get on base — the strikeout pitchers.

While most of the top-rated lifetime hitters are from other eras, a good percentage of the best all-time career strikeout pitchers are not only from this era, but currently active. Five of the first 15 all-time strikeout leaders are Gaylord Perry (third), Nolan Ryan (14th) and Ferguson Jenkins (15th).

Other recent "moderns" in the top 15 are Bob Gibson, Jim Bunning, Warren Spahn, Bob Feller, Don Drysdale and Sam McDowell.

Playboy Magazine (I just read the in-depth stories, never look at the pictures) recently asked major league managers to name an all-star team of the best current clutch players.

HERE WAS the team: pitcher, Tom Seaver; catcher, Thurman Munson; first base, Rod Carew; second base, Joe Morgan; shortstop, Dave Concepcion; third base, tie between George Brett and Pete Rose; left field, George Foster; center field, Cesar Cedeno; right field, Dave Parker.

Please note that half of the "team" belongs to Cincinnati, including practically the whole infield.

Based on total number of hits, baseball's top pinch-hitters (through July 6 of this year) are Smokey Burgess (144), Manny Mota (129), Jerry Lynch (116), Red Lucas (114), Gates Brown (107), Dave Philley (93), Elmer Valo (90), and Dalton Jones and Ed Kranepool (81).

Based on batting average as pinch-hitters (again, through July 6), the top sub swingers are Tommy Davis (.314), Kranepool (.306), Red Schoendienst (.303), Fatty Fothergill (.300), Philley (.299) and Mota (.297).

Note that only Kranepool and Mota are in both categories.

"SO WHAT?" — BASEBALL TRIVIA 1. In 1946-47, the athlete in question starred for the Cleveland Rebels of the Basketball Association of America (later to become part of the NBA), scoring an average of 14.0 points a game, which was the eighth best average in the league. He made second team All-Pro. Then, without spring training, he moved into the Cincinnati outfield as a regular and hit .283 as a rookie. He lasted for a decade in the majors and finished his career with a .290 lifetime batting average.

2. Hank Aaron was undoubtedly the greatest player to ever have his name appear first in the Baseball Register and Who's Who in Baseball, the two venerable baseball record books. Who now has replaced Aaron as the first man (alphabetically) in the record books?

3. Who was the toughest player to strike out last year in the National League?

4. What player's only two big league grand slams both have come off the same pitcher, who was the pitcher and when were they hit?

5. Who is the most famous teammate Don Drysdale ever had?

ANSWERS: (Make believe these are turned up-side-down, like in those big, important sports publications quizzes).

1. Frankie Baumholtz.

2. Righthanded rookie pitcher Don Aase, who was traded from Boston to California in mid-season.

3. Tim Foli, who struck out once every 22.25 times at bat.

4. Steve Garvey hit his only two big league grand slams off relief pitcher Clay Carroll (since retired) in 1977. Those, incidentally, were the only two grand slams Carroll served up in a major league career spanning 14 years.

5. Drysdale played high school baseball at Van Nuys High with Robert Redford, who played the infield and outfield and "was a pretty good ballplayer," says Drysdale. Redford also was on the school track team.

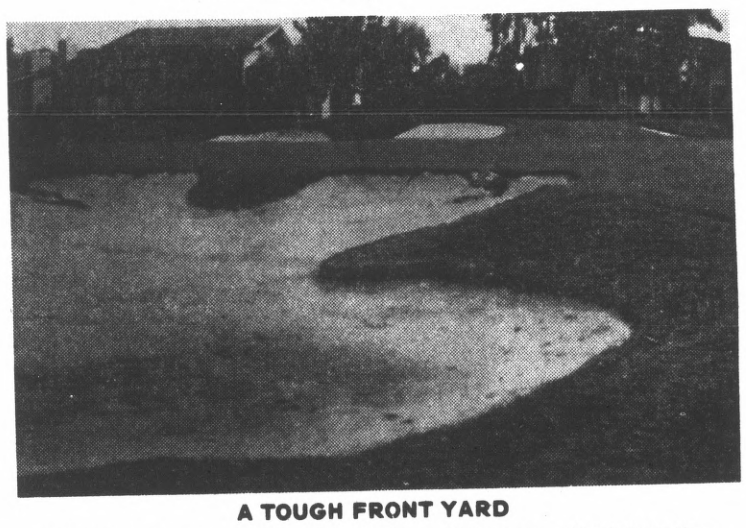
Golf course explorer

By Hal Gevertz



A TOUGH FRONT YARD

These traps are just one of the features that make play interesting.

In 1843, when Capt. Stephen Smith's party first stepped ashore at Bodega Bay (named after Lt. Juan Francisco De La Bodega Quadro, the Spanish explorer who had discovered the bay in 1775, the primary concern of the pioneers and of the settlers who followed was one of survival. After playing the recently developed Bodega Harbour Golf Links, located near the town of Bodega Bay, 60 miles north of San Francisco on Highway 1, I felt the same way.

The Robert Trent Jones, Jr. architectural firm has taken advantage of some imposing, terraced and rolling hill acreage, nestled against the Pacific Ocean, to build a very interesting Scottish linksland golf course. This nine-hole layout plays to 6,158 yards from the championship tees by using two completely separate, neatly mowed teeing areas.

BODEGA HARBOUR Golf Links is not set up like the typical golf courses in the Bay Area. The fairways, which were heavily grassed and a bit troublesome hitting out of the day I played, are "shaped mowed." While the landing-area grasses are cut short, the turf from the tee to the fairways are rough-cut with various degrees of height. This method of mowing penalizes the poor shot while rewarding accurate play.

This also compensates for the treeless terrain that is not missed on the new, natural ocean view golfing and residential community. In act, you can add another 15 minutes playing time just taking in the panoramic beauty of the California coastline and its miles of unspoiled sandy beaches.

Most of the golf course doesn't have any paths between holes and what little it has is concealed from view by natural wildflower shrubbery, so expect some extra time if you are playing the course for the first time.

BODEGA HARBOUR is not a track for the out of shape "divot maker," as some extremely hilly ground presents itself on the first three holes. And when the sea breezes are stilled you can play them with more club as not one yard of added roll comes with any shot.

The next three holes reverse themselves and it's downhill lies on very swing. This includes the number one handicap 435 yard fifth that comes with a slight dogleg left. With wind as a constant factor, two unusually long woods shots are imperative to get close to the green. An array of deep bunkered traps in front and by its sides will make pars or birdies a premium on this demanding hole.

The par four, 306-yard seventh is a California classic. The tee shot has to travel over 185 yards of tidal marshland that is protected by the California Coastal Commission, forbidding anyone from entering the marshes to look for a lost ball with penalty of forfeiture of play. The drive has to reach a sleeve of fairway, backed up by a large sand dune. It's then a 90-degree left turn, using a short iron to a large strategically trapped green.

THE PAR THREE, eighth requires a tee shot of 151 yards to a long raised green with a deep bunker running the length of its left side. In between all this are the forbidden marshes, extending their watery invitation to misfire and become one of the many last ball patrons.

The par four ninth plays from 410 to 470 yards. Whatever tee you use its going to be difficult for the downhill fairway is situated on the side of a cliff. The green, tucked in on its right corner, is far below the cliffside fairway through a narrow opening. An unerring second shot will have to be executed to avoid marshland environment and front and rear "sandys" protecting the green.

Bodega Harbour Golf Links has some elaborate bunkering systems protecting fairways and many frontal entranceways to the greens. I found them deeply sanded and well-tended. A soft explosion shot that settles last is a must to avoid the runaway golf ball on the medium fast greens that average around 10,000 square feet.

The beautiful, consistent seaside bent greens are individual in nature. That's because they are built over different angles of terrain, but where many putting strokes will be made on level surfaces. That's why each putt has to be looked over carefully. Many subtle breaks also will come into play.

PRACTICE putting and driving range facilities will not be found at Bodega Harbour, but a magnificent club house with an outstanding ocean view is located over the pro shop. It's a great place to rest your tired limbs after playing this strenuous "light bag only" golf course.

The quaint commercial fishing harbor of Bodega Bay, which is close by, will give one the opportunity to purchase fresh fish or try some tempting seafood specialties at a landmark restaurant on the wharf before going home.

If you have a sunny day off and would like to get away from the congested city golf course liefe, try Bodega Bay, a "no-wait" golf course where sea and land hold hands in peaceful and refreshing delight.

Tommy John's Book Worth Reading

By Samuel C. Chabdler

Long ago the Romans formed a proverb reading, "A brave man may fall, but he cannot yield."

From the records of American sports come many stories of notable athletes who fell and fought their way back to break records and set new concepts of courage. The latest of these stories tells of the Los Angeles pitcher, Tommy John. ("The Tommy John Story," Revell, 1978, $6.95).

By April of the 1974 season, Tommy John had a 5-0 record with two shutouts. By the middle of July with 11 weeks left in the season he had a 13-3 record and was hoping to win 20 games. His earned run average stood at 2.58 while the Dodgers were leading in their pennant drive.

On a day in Montreal, Tommy was pitching in the fourth inning of a game that he hoped would be another shutout. As he arched his arm to throw his sinker ball he received a horrible pain that was so sharp it seemed, somehow, that his arm had been ripped from its socket and was flying off at right angles to his body. "It was a surrealistic sensation," he wrote, "almost like a dream."

Seeing that something was wrong, the home plate umpire called for time while Manager Walter Alston hurried to the mound. Later a doctor told Tommy that the only thing that held his elbow joint together was skin and the nerve running down the channel. He also advised Tommy John of the necessity of an operation and the advisability of looking for another way to make a living.

The Tommy John Story tells of a great man's struggle to comeback amid constant pain, depression, doubt and fears. Like many others before him Tommy John learned the meaning of hope and faith in God and in himself. Thus he grew until he could write, "My experience has been worth every hard moment that was spent. God has used my injury to teach me so much about faith, love and His power. But we've also had the privilege of watching Him use my experience to help others. He gives us opportunities to share our faith and Christian testimony in ways we never dreamed possible."

After his recovery Tommy John returned to baseball and won twenty games in the season and pitched the winning game in the National League playoffs and pitched in the World Series of 1977.

Everyone should read a book like the Tommy John story now and then. It convinces one that the age of man is far from over.

EFS Rally, Win

By JOHN MURPHY
Times Correspondent

Pressure situations are old hat to Peninsula Joe DiMaggio League player Danny O'Regan.

As a member of three North Peninsula League baseball championship teams at El Camino High, the lefthanded-hitting outfielder learned how to perform in heart-pounding circumstances.

O'Regan's DiMaggio League team, South San Francisco, didn't make it to the regional playoffs this season but the College of San Mateo-bound speedster was selected by San Mateo coach John Goulding to join his Eureka Federal Savings team for the regionals anyway.

Each regional representative is allowed to take three players from the remaining teams in its league to add to its roster. Goulding, perhaps realizing O'Regan's ability in the clutch, inserted the former El Camino star in his lineup along with newcomers Tony Bolla, a catcher from San Bruno, and Millbrae's Daryl Fazzio (another catcher).

O'Regan didn't disappoint his new coach Friday at Daly City's Marchbank Park. He drove in the tying run with two outs in the bottom of the seventh, and EFS went on to defeat Flying Goose of Daly City 5-3 in nine innings.

EFS, champion of the Peninsula League, was slated to face the winner of Friday's Overfelt-Flying Goose game today at Marchbank at noon. If San Mateo loses this game then another contest was scheduled immediately following to determine who advances in the State playoffs.

Brian Silvas, EFS' ace hurler, allowed only one hit through seven innings to Flying Goose, a potent offensive club. But that one hit was a solo home run by Matt Campi in the fourth inning. The HR was about the zillionth of the year for Campi, a power-hitting St. Ignatius grad.

Lefthander John Vincent, whom Flying Goose acquired from South City, almost made Campi's run stand up. The All-County pitcher-first baseman from Serra had blanked EFS for six consecutive innings going into the seventh.

But somebody upstairs, apparently, has decided that Vincent should not win any games this year in the DiMaggio League (no matter how well he pitches).

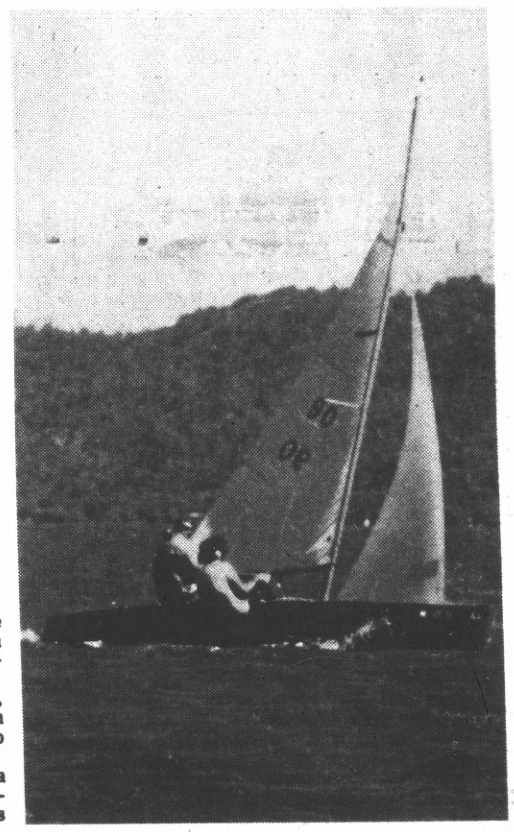
EFS' Gary Holden reached base on a walk and advanced to second on a fielder's choice to set the stage for O'Regan's key two-out, two-strike single.

The teams traded runs in the eighth making the score 2-2 before San Mateo put the game away with three more runs off a pair of Goose relievers in the ninth.

Jeff Gradinger's run-scoring single and Holden's two-RBI double were the big hits in the inning for EFS.

EFS	000	000	113—5	11	0
Flying Goose	000	100	011—3	4	1

Silvas (W), Joyner (9) and Bolla; Vincent, Nickas (9-1), Bayley (9) and Eagleton. HR — Campi (FG) fourth, none on. 2B — Kennick (EFS), Holden (EFS), McGlennon (EFS).



NATIONAL WINNER

Walt Lunardi of Daly City in Restless took top honors in the recent 28th Zephyr Nationals at Clear Lake. Lunardi had a first, two seconds and two thirds in a week of racing to take the title. Ralph Gehiken of Moss Beach was second. Other area participants were Paul Donohue and Mike Gowan of San Bruno, Sandy Kittel of San Mateo and Jim Sorensen of Hillsborough. In the children's race there were three local winners: Mike Gehiken, Sean Gowan and Karen Kittel.

Mercy Girls

Several Mercy High stars will compete for Santa Clara next fall.

Mercy basketball players Penny Stack (5-8¾) and Liz Bruno (6-1), an All-County player who competed in the North-South CCS all-star game, will battle for spots as freshmen this fall.

Marianne Barrett, an All-County volleyball player, will also try that sport at Santa Clara.

Swimmers Make the Nationals

Nine members of the Ladera Oaks Aquatic Club have qualified for the Junior Olympic National Championships, which get underway Thursday at the Santa Clara International Swim Center.

Heading the list of Ladera swimmers is 15-year-old Menlo-Atherton High School student Steve Kahl, who will compete in the 200, 400 and 1500 meter freestyle events. Kahl has a 1:59.35 best in the 200 free.

Former Menlo-Atherton teammate Chris Lanier — now a freshman at UCLA — has qualified for the 100 and 200 backstroke events and the 100 free.

Foster City's Kerry Courtley, a junior at Burlingame High, will compete in the 200 fly, as will Ladera teammate Susan Reynolds of Menlo Park.

Other Ladera qualifiers include foer Woodside swim star Bill Purcell, M-A junior Tami Purcell, Atherton's Karen Bretall, Beth Benson of Menlo Park and Amy Solvenson of La Entrada School.

Meanwhile, Ladera member Jane Abraham qualified for the World Games — being held in Berlin, Germany later this month — as a result of her third place finish in the 100-meter free (56.94) in the AAU Long Course Championships at Woodland, Texas over the weekend.

Coast Board Solves Playground Problem

Pacifica teachers will not have to give up part of their lunch hour to supervise children on school playgrounds.

Trustees of the Laguna Salada School District voted Thursday to expand school clerk duties to include supervision of the cafeteria and playground.

Principals and their assistants also will be asked to watch the children during lunch hours.

At its last meeting the board had voted not to allocate $30,000 for noon duty supervisors.

The salaries of the noon duty supervisors had been paid by a civic center tax override, ended by passage of Proposition 13.

When trustees voted not to fund the supervision of playgrounds out of the general fund they asked for a report from the administration on who would watch the children.

Three plans were presented to the board.

One plan called for teachers to watch the playgrounds for 30 minutes a day. Another recommended teachers supervise the children for part of the lunch hour and that one supervisor would be hired to watch the yard.

The plan accepted, the third alternative, was for the noon duty supervisor position to be eliminated and the school clerk's position be expanded to include supervision of the yard area.

This plan will cost the district about $11,500.

Even though teachers will not have to watch children while on their lunch break, they still were dissatisfied with the recommendation.

Teachers and parents said the school yard is a busy place at that time of the day and they thought the district would be surprised to find it needed more help.

Sharp Park parent Diane Purdie said if only one person was supervising the children she would have her hands full.

"I hope they don't all turn on her," she said.

Superintendent James Brien said, for example, that at Pedro Valley School there would be one supervisor to watch 132 students.

Oddstad School teacher Julie Wexler said there are going to be a few surprises in store for the district administration next year.

"There are accidents. There are fights. You need a lot of staff on hand," she said.

Other teachers asked what would happen on rainy days and who would watch the yard when someone was hurt and had to be taken to the office.

Trustee Grady Hesters said this plan was a "realistic solution" to the problem.

When parents and teachers are looking at the total budget, a $30,000 cut may seem insignificant. But, Hesters said, that is not the case.

"You really do have to look at the numbers in total," he said. "It's all those little pieces that mean getting our budget back in balance."

Teacher Karen Warner said she and others would believe the cut was justified if the district had to cut $1 million or $2 million out of its budget.

"It's just too big of a lump to swallow," she said.

Skyline Takes Mail-in Signups

Registration by mail for Skyline College evening and Saturday (Continuing Education) classes is underway.

Any prospective student who has not received a list of course offerings, including registration form, may obtain a Skyline College Fall Classes 1978 brochure from any San Mateo County library, many city recreation centers, or directly from the college, 3300 College Drive, San Bruno 94066.

Phone 355-7000, ext. 301 for further information.

Deadline for registering by mail or bringing registration forms to the college is Aug. 25.

General registration for Continuing Education classes which still have openings will be Sept. 2 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the college cafeteria and during the first week of classes, which begin Sept. 6.

Several hundred classes, in approximately 40 general subject areas, are being offered for credit in the evening and on Saturdays this fall. Many short courses are included.

However all Community Services (non-credit) programs have been discontinued for 1978-79.

Skyline is a tuition-free community college serving the residents of the San Mateo County Community College District. Continuing Education courses also are open to residents of San Francisco, with no permit necessary.

Residents of other California counties must present a release from their own community college district permitting enrollment in a specific class at Skyline.

"Bag Day" will be Sept. 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., open to the public, with everything one can fit into a bag for $1.

All proceeds will benefit the Humane Society's low-cost spay and neuter clinic's "needy program." Donations of reusable items for this sale are needed. Call 344-7643, ext. 215 for further details.

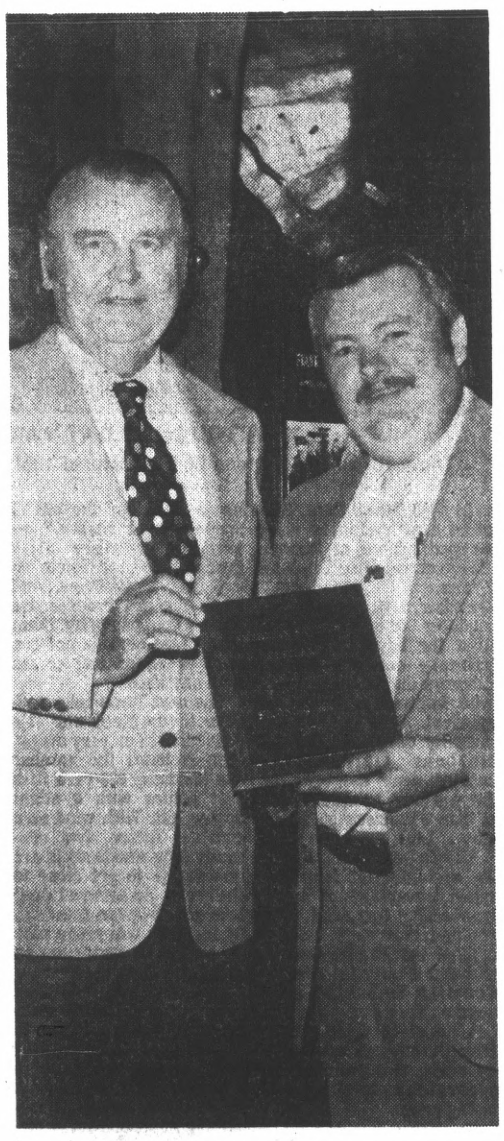
AARP Will Hear Talk By Fogliasso

The monthly meeting of the American Association of Retired Persons will be Aug. 14 in the Lake Merced Community Center, 45 Lake Merced Blvd., Daly City, at 11:30 a.m.

Speaker will be Dan Fogliasso, a state highway superintendent, who lives in Broadmoor Village. Fogliasso is Show Chairman for the 14th Annual Golden Gate Gem and Mineral Show Oct. 21 and 22 at the Westlake Park Community Center.

Tour Chairman Doris Johnson has postponed a group trip to Solvang and Hearst Castle until Sept. 28 and 29. Those who are interested should contact her.

AARP members again are asked to bring their old clothes, etc. to the Aug. 4 meeting. The Turnabout Shop will sell these items and the money used to help students.



SERVICE AWARDED

On behalf of the staff of American Savings and Loan Association's Westlake office, 5 Southgate Ave., Martin Carlson, manager, receives the association's management award during a special dinner sponsored by the association. The award, presented by John R. Wolfe, vice president of savings administration, cited the staff's excellence in savings services.

Agreement Reached For Remodeling

By HEIDI VAN ZANT

A class action suit against the developer of 100 condominium units in Westborough Hills has been settled.

The developer has agreed to put $1.6 million into an escrow account to be used to remodel the homes so that they will meet building standards for seismic safety and fire protection.

In their complaint, the homeowners have alleged that the condominiums were not built to code and that they were defectively constructed.

The condominiums involved are on Fairfax Way in Westborough Hills.

Each building contains two units, with two buildings joined together to form a four-unit duplex.

Defendants named in the suit are Norpen Development Co. of Los Angles, J. H. Snyder Co. of Los Angeles and Loews Corp. of New York.

The original suit was filed in June 1974, and has been amended several times since. A settlement was filed in Superior Court July 20.

John Noonan, South San Francisco city attorney, said a hearing will be held Aug. 15 to determine if the settlement is acceptable.

The condominiums were completed in 1972 and originally sold for less than $30,000, Noonan said. Several months later, the city attorney said, homeowners began complaining to the city about the quality of the construction.

The complaints developed into the lawsuit, at which time South San Francisco began its own investigation to "find out whether there were any hazards to life up there," Noonan said.

The city attorney said that before homes are built, the developer is required to have a structural engineer certify that the homes meet city building standards for seismic safety.

Because the homes are less than a mile from the San Andreas Fault, Noonan said the city requires the homes have extra reinforcement.

Noonan said the city's investigation showed the homes did not have the extra-reinforcement, which the city required.

However, he said, no conclusion could be drawn as to whether the homes could or could not withstand an earthquake.

In the settlement, the defendants have denied any wrongdoing.

However, because a trial would be expensive for all parties and litigation could take some time, the defendants have said they wish to settle the matter.

The settlement shall not be construed to mean, they said, that the defendants are guilty of any of the allegations.

Under the terms of the settlement, $1,646,000 will be placed into escrow for the homeowners to use to complete the needed remodeling.

For fire safety, the suit states that either a sprinkler system be installed in each unit or that a heat and smoke detection system be installed with a connection to the South San Francisco Fire Department.
